It is very likely you will have spotted the Cornwall Air Ambulance flying overhead on a mission. The charity's new red and yellow helicopter is unmistakable and often turns up in unexpected places, even on occasion in someone's back garden. You might have seen it land on the beach, on moorland or at the roadside, but what you don't see is what happens next. Each year the helicopter flies on over 750 missions across Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly. The critical care paramedics on board the air ambulance are tasked to the most seriously sick and injured patients in the county. So, when the helicopter lands on scene, that is just the start of the story.

In order to give the public an insight into the lifesaving service their donations provide, Cornwall Air Ambulance opened its doors to a film crew for a special documentary series. The show Cornwall Air 999 follows the charity's critical care paramedics and pilots as they attend emergencies over the busy summer months. The series for digital TV channel Really focuses on real-life rescue situations, the patients helped by the aircrew and the effect Covid-19 has had on the service.

“Cornwall Air Ambulance relies on public donations to fly these missions and reach people in their moment of need. So, as a charity it is important to raise awareness about the types of incidents we attend, and how vital the service is here in Cornwall. But it is equally special for our supporters to be able to see first-hand the service they are funding and the difference they make to people's lives.”

Cornwall Air 999 shows on Discovery's Freeview digital TV channel Really every Tuesday at 9pm.
